DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(e) the invention was described in a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention thereof by the applicant for patent, or on an international application by another who has fulfilled the requirements of paragraphs (1), (2), and (4) of section 371(c) of this title before the invention thereof by the applicant for patent.

The changes made to 35 U.S.C. 102(e) by the American Inventors Protection Act of 1999 (AIPA) and the Intellectual Property and High Technology Technical Amendments Act of 2002 do not apply when the reference is a U.S. patent resulting directly or indirectly from an international application filed before November 29, 2000. Therefore, the prior art date of the reference is determined under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) prior to the amendment by the AIPA (pre-AIPA 35 U.S.C. 102(e)).

Claims 1-3, 7-12 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by Sasaki, US Patent 6,996,240. Sasaki discloses a processor 3 for adjusting the frequency characteristic of a sound source 2 comprising memory 34, successive comparison analysis part 37, speaker 5 and microphone 6. The signal from the sound source 2 is the target frequency characteristic which is stored in memory 34 in real-time. As taught in the abstract, there is a optional frequency with which the differences between the sound source 2 and the signal from the microphone is referenced (a fixed level band). That accomplishes the estimation of the relative level of the signal component in each variable level band on the basis of a level of the signal component in the fixed level band. The regenerative signal processing part is the adjustment device configured to adjust the level of the sound source based on the estimated relative level of the sound component in each variable level band. Speaker 5 acts as the output device. Claim 1, 9, and 11 are rejected. Regarding claims 2, 3, and 10-12, the signals in question are sensitive to human audibility. As to claim 7, the objective of the apparatus of Sasaki was to equalize the sound source 2 and the sound picked up by microphone 6, i.e. make their difference zero. See column 3 lines 17-46. Per claim 8, the measuring signal generation device is the sound source 2.

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 4-6 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Sasaki in view of Ouchi et al, US Patent 6,072,879. Sasaki does not disclose that the fixed level band is centered at a frequency of 1KHz (as to claim 4) or included (in the frequency range of 500 Hz to 2 kHz). Ouchi et al teach a sound field control device comprising equalizers 134 and 140. The system uses the frequency range between 500 Hz and 2 kHz to flatten the frequency response of the input signal because such range is least affected by the room acoustics. Therefore, it would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time of invention to modify Sasaki to use the range taught by Ouchi for the purpose of equalization.
